THE WALLACE HOUSE GAVEL.

Interesting Memento of Days of '76.

The following clipping in regard to the presentation of the gavel used by the late Gen. W. H. Wallace as speaker of the historic and famous "Wallace House" will be of interest to many Union people:

Very appropriate resolutions were adopted by the Timrod library yesterday afternoon on the presentation of the gavel of the Wallace house to that association. The gavel is a gift of Capt. W. A. Courtenay, of Newry, and the presentation was made by that gifted orator, Gen. LeRoy F. Youmans, and the response made by Col. J. B. Norris, the president of the library. After the presentation the following resolutions offered by Col. Henry T. Thompson were adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of the Timrod library are due and are hereby tendered Hon. William A. Courtenay, of Newry, S. C., for the very valuable gift he has made the library in the shape of the historic gavel which was used by the presiding officer of the Wallace house in 1876.

"Resolved, further, That Capt. Courtenay be requested to address us a letter giving us his views in regard to the proposed erection of a library building in Columbia."

The gavel is unpretentious and simple, as was befitting the time. Its walnut head contrasts strangely with a handle of cheap pine, with a brass ferrule in the end. But its ruggedness suggests the house itself. The gavel has been bound with two handsome silver bands on one of which is inscribed: "This is the gavel of the historic Wallace house, used by the Hon. W. H. Wallace, November 28, December 22, 1876, as speaker. Presented to the Timrod library, Columbia, S. C., by Hon. William A. Courtenay, 1905."

On the other hand, the inscription reads, "April 3, 1877, the president ordered the secretary of war to withdraw the troops from the state house of South Carolina, which was duly done in regular official course, troops leaving April 10, 1877, on which day Governor Wade Hampton occupied the governor's office."

Sad Death In Gaffney.

The sad news that Mrs. Arthur Kendrick of Gaffney, formerly Miss Edna Foster of this city and a daughter of Mr. Thad K. Foster, died Monday afternoon was received here with deep and sincere regret by the many friends of Mrs. Kendrick and her family. The warm and heartfelt sympathy of all of these goes out to the bereaved husband and parents and relatives who mourn the untimely loss of this estimable and lovely young matron who just two years ago was married here. A host of friends here will lament this sad death and with sorrowful hearts extend their love and sympathy to the bereaved in the dark hour of bereavement.

We clip the following notice from the Tuesday issue of the Gaffney Ledger:

Mrs. Arthur Kendrick died yesterday afternoon about one o'clock at her home on Frederick street, after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. Kendrick was formerly Miss Edna Foster, of Union, and had been married nearly two years. She was about twenty-two years of age, a member of the First Baptist church of this city, and a most estimable young woman in every particular.

The funeral will be conducted today from the First Baptist church and the remains interred in Oak-land cemetery.

The bereaved young husband has the sympathy of the entire city in his great sorrow.

West Springs Versus Hampton.

The second game between Hampton and West Springs was played on the Hampton diamond Saturday October 14 and the score resulted 11 to 10 for the West Springs team.

The Hampton team was strongly reinforced by Woodruff and Cross Keys, Betsill doing some fine work in the box, while Lee, and the baby boy Lancaster, did some star fielding for West Springs.

The West Springs boys will not soon forget the kind and courteous treatment rendered them by the Hampton team, nor the bounteous dinner served on the ground.

It was a great pleasure for the West Springs team to visit that section of country situated 2 miles above Cross Anchor. The land is level and productive, and the many pretty homes gives evidence that they are lovers at home.

A Story of Two Violins.

Between the years 1780 and 1789, Mr. John Gage, Sr., came to Union from Coleraine County, Antrim, in the North of Ireland. A few years later Mr. John Gage, Jr., a cousin, came also to Union from the same place in Ireland. One of the two brought with him two violins; these two instruments afterwards became the property of Mr. Columbus Gage, the youngest son of Mr. John Gage, Jr. Mr. C. Gage loaned one of these violins to Simon Farr, either during or shortly after the Civil War. Simon never returned it, but pawned it to Mr. Daniel T. Black for five dollars. In conversation with Mr. Black some time afterwards Mr. Gage told Mr. Black about having loaned Simon the violin. Mr. Black said to Mr. Gage that he, Black, had the violin, that Simon Farr had pawned it to him for the loan of five dollars, but says Mr. Black, I will give it back to you, Mr. Gage, because it is yours. Mr. Gage said, "No Dan, you can keep it. I have one, the mate to it, and I don't play much now. We not knowing anything about this violin, but knew that Mr. Black had an old violin, having heard him play it many a time. We asked him if he still had the old violin he used to play and he said yes, and told us the story above related. Mr. Black had put the old violin in the furniture repair shop of Mr. T. E. Bailey to have some repairs done on it, where rats had gnawed it. Mr. Black very kindly said the violin by rights ought to be and belong to Mr. C. Gage's family and he gave it to Miss Sydney Gage without charge, which act is highly appreciated by the children and grandchildren of Mr. C. Gage. The negro, Simon Farr, to whom Mr. Gage loaned the violin, was a slave of Dr. Joseph H. Dogan and changed his name to Farr and was elected to the legislature from Union County during Scott's administration when the radicals, renegades, scoundrels, carpet baggers and negroes had charge of the State. Mr. Frank Gage, of Jacksonville, Fla., has the mate to this violin Mr. Black so kindly gave to Miss Sydney Gage. These violins may be the make of Giovanni Paolo Maggini, the celebrated Italian violin maker, whose work dates back to 1600.

If this old violin could talk, it doubtless could a tale unfold that would make the hair on your head stand on end like the quills upon the back of a fretted porcupine. For well do we remember when it played a leaning part in an amateur minstrel troupe of all home talent, namely: Dan Black, Warren Barnett, Munroe Fant, Bush (George) Greer and several others. Bush was then a comic looking boy, and he played the part of the drunkards son in "Ten Night's in a Bar-room." And he presented a touching sight as he bent over the prostrate form of his father lying upon the floor of the bar room, while the troupe sang, "Father, dear father, come home with me now," with violin and guitar accompaniments. The "end men" of this troupe cracked some good jokes. One was "Hello Sambo! whar you bin all dis long time." "I bin a boarding down at the rock house, part of the time with Mr. Sheriff Joe Fant, and part with Mr. Sheriff John Gibbs." "Yas, you bin in jail, den." "Yas." "What dey put you in dar for, Sambo." "Nothing much. I borrowed a watch from a man." "Dat's curis." "Well, you see, I had to knock the man down to make him lend it to me." "Sambo, was dar any other negro in der but you." "Yas, a feller was in der wid me." "What he in dar fur." "For picking up a little piece of rope." "Dat's quar." "Yas, but dar was a cow at one end of the rope. Dat feller he tried to guy me one day and axed me what time it was. I say, I thought it was about milking time." Those were lively days in Union, when the old Confederate veterans got home full of humor and fierce fun.

Joke on Both Butler.

In the Federal Court yesterday State Senator T. B. Butler of Cherokee was cross-examining a witness. The witness, after a blundering attempt to explain how the doors were situated in a place where he bought whiskey, said: "But you know how it is!" And there was a hearty laugh at the senator's expense. He took the merriment in good part.
